NH Coastal Climate Summit
University of New Hampshire
75 Main St.
Durham, NH 03824

Dear Friends,

I'm sorry that I can't be with you today, but I join you in your efforts to protect New Hampshire's coastal watershed.

New Hampshire's coastal communities are an integral part of our state's environment, economy, and identity. In order for New Hampshire's coastal communities to thrive, we must work to strengthen and protect our coastal watershed and ensure that we are prepared for the increasing threat of climate impacts. Today's summit provides an opportunity to discuss these issues and collaborate across different sectors to ensure that our coastal watershed and communities have a sustainable future. Please know that I'm grateful for your critical work and am pleased to see that so many people in New Hampshire share these priorities.

Thank you to the NH Coastal Adaption Workgroup for organizing today's summit, and for the important work that you do to protect our state's coastal environment. I look forward to continuing to work together to strengthen the resiliency of New Hampshire's coastline.

With every good wish,

Margaret Wood Hassan
United States Senator
